Baby's mom tracked down

Angelica-Leslie's parents arrested in Kitchener, investigators reveal

Three and a half months after an infant girl was found abandoned, bruised and face down in a freezing cold North York stairwell, investigators say they have tracked down the girl's parents.

A married couple, formerly from Toronto, were both arrested at their Kitchener home Wednesday night in relation to the abandonment of the little girl the city has come to know as Angelica-Leslie.

"We knew where they lived and we went out there and arrested them and we brought them back," proclaimed lead investigator, Toronto Police Det. Keith Moxley, at a news conference yesterday.

The girl was found by a passerby in the stairwell of a parking garage outside a North York shopping plaza on Jan. 30.

Dressed in a jumper and a snowsuit, she was bleeding from the nose and had several bruises.

"This kind of case touches the heart of everybody," said Moxley. "This is an abandoned infant left in a stairwell in very cold temperatures and it touches our heart when something like that happens and you want to get to the bottom of it."

Video footage later obtained from the garage showed a man parking what appeared to be a green Ford Escort outside the stairwell and carrying a small package inside. Moments later, the man returned to his vehicle without the package, which was later revealed to be the infant girl.

The couple, police said, had been married for six years and was under investigation since early March. Both the alleged parents are charged with abandoning a child under the age of 10, failing to provide the necessities of life, assault causing bodily harm and criminal negligence.

A publication ban has been imposed on any evidence or arguments made at the hearing and on any information that could identify the abandoned girl or the two accused.

Samaritan scolded after homeless woman given food policy on homeless

» Douglas said the homeless woman, who could not be located later for comment, had been asked to leave the restaurant on several previous occasions. Tim Hortons, she said, does not have a policy on the treatment of the homeless.

No good deed involving doughnuts, it appears, goes unpunished.

Two weeks after an employee at a Tim Hortons in London was fired, then rehired, after she gave a child a free Timbit, Toronto investment manager Teresa Lee bought breakfast Wednesday for a pregnant homeless woman at a Tim Hortons downtown — then was scolded by a restaurant employee unhappy the homeless woman stayed in the restaurant to eat.

The employee, Lee said, told her the Tim Hortons at King and Victoria streets does not let homeless people eat inside, even if they are eating Tim Hortons food, because they "make a mess."

The homeless woman, Tim Hortons spokesperson Rachel Douglas wrote in an e-mail yesterday, had been "disruptive to customers and staff" on "several" occasions in the past. But Douglas did not say the woman had caused any problems Wednesday morning, and she apologized later to Lee — though Lee was not satisfied with what Douglas said. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Hockey manager charged with fraud

Woman allegedly took money for personal use

A former minor hockey manager was arrested and charged by police yesterday for allegedly bilking a children's hockey team of $18,000.

Mary Hardwick has been charged with fraud over $5,000 following a police investigation into the team bank accounts of the 2006-07 and 2007-08 atom AA Etobicoke Canucks.

"The funds were being diverted for personal use," said Det. Avininder Chadha of the Toronto fraud squad. "(Minor hockey) touches everybody's life. Everyone seems to have kids in hockey or coaching or managing hockey. Parents have invested money in their kids' future and things like this can mean a kid loses a whole season. It shouldn't happen."

suspension

» The Greater Toronto Hockey League suspended the Hardwicks last year following revelations about the missing money.

Mary Hardwick's husband, Jack, who coached the teams, said last night neither he nor his wife will comment, adding they've hired a lawyer.

The Toronto Star first reported the allegations last year, detailing dozens of team bank account transactions for food, entertainment and cash withdrawals from the team's account. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Afrocentric school a go

Board approves pilot project after bitter debate

In the aftermath of a bitter and often gut-wrenching debate that preceded the decision to set up a public Afrocentric school in Toronto, hopes were riding high yesterday that black students who struggle academically might finally be getting the educational boost they desperately need.

opposition's argument

» Opponents of an Afrocentric school argue it represents a giant step backward from the integration ideal of the civil rights movement. Even Premier Dalton McGuinty has said kids should "learn together and grow together."

"We have one shot to make this right," said Louis March of the African Canadian Heritage Association.

On Wednesday, Toronto's public school board voted to open its first Afrocentric school in hopes of lowering the 40 per cent dropout rate among Toronto's black teens.

While the school will be open to all students, the aim is to have black teachers and a curriculum that engages black kids when it takes in its first junior kindergarten to Grade 5 students in September 2009. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tributes planned for shooting anniversary

One year ago today, 15-year-old Jordan Manners was shot inside C.W. Jefferys high school.

It's a tragic anniversary his family, staff and students at the school plan to mark through assemblies, a memorial tree, a plaque, a barbecue, and, in the afternoon, whatever personal, small tributes students have planned.

mother

» Jordan's mother, Loreen Small, will return to the school for the first time since her son died. She may attend an assembly.

"Some students said they wanted to have a prayer circle, others want to release 16 blue balloons — others want to play basketball," said principal Jim Spyropoulos.

The balloons represent how old Jordan would have been, and "a small group of students ordered them, and are going to release them around the time the whole thing happened."

The board has arranged for social workers to be available to staff and students if they need someone to talk to. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Massive drug busts at airport

Nearly $5 million in illegal drugs were seized last weekend in several major busts at Pearson International Airport.

Canada Customs officers intercepted more than 800 grams of heroin, six kilos of cocaine and 185 kilos of marijuana in two separate shipments, agency spokesperson Patrizia Giolti yesterday.

An examination of an aircraft on May 10 resulted in the discovery of an 870-gram plastic-wrapped heroin ball worth more than $348,000 and six plastic-wrapped cocaine bricks worth $800,000 in an untagged bag, Giolti said. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

‘Rent-a-guest’ scrutinized

Weddings set up for immigration purposes

When Canadian immigration officials in New Delhi began to notice the same guests appearing in photos of different weddings submitted as evidence for sponsoring overseas brides and grooms to Canada, an alarm went off.

Officers at the visa post pulled out all the other spousal sponsorship files to compare notes, and further investigations would discover several local temples were actually involved in “rent-a-guest” operations, setting up wedding ceremonies for immigration purposes.

To crack down on those using phony marriages to come to Canada, Citizenship and Immigration Canada, according to news reports, is now sending investigative teams around the world, especially to high-fraud regions such as India, China and Vietnam, to gather intelligence on staged marriages.

Immigration officials would not confirm the establishment of such overseas teams.

Charest rejects proposal

The crucifix in Quebec’s legislature belongs in a museum as Quebecers embrace “open secularism” and reach out to minorities, says a much-hyped report looking at ethnic tensions in the province.

But in what may be a harbinger of the politics to come, Premier Jean Charest immediately rejected the proposal, which is one of the major symbolic recommendations of the $5-million study he commissioned last year.

“We cannot erase our history,” Charest said yesterday in pledging to keep the crucifix where it is — hanging over the Speaker’s chair.

The 300-page report into the accommodation of minorities, drafted by sociologist Gerard Bouchard and philosopher Charles Taylor, dives headfirst into anxieties that Quebec culture will be lost amid a sea of newcomers.

Alarmists, however, will be disappointed. Bouchard and Taylor throw cold water on their concerns, insisting there has been much ado about nothing. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Crash victim mourned

Man hit by ’copter last week in B.C.

There was a sad fusion of African hymns and hip-hop salutes as family and friends bid farewell yesterday to the son of a Kenyan cabinet minister killed last week in a bizarre helicopter crash in southeastern British Columbia.

Hundreds of mourners packed a gym in Cranbrook, B.C., to say goodbye to Isaiah Otieno, 20, who died instantly when a faltering aircraft nosedived into the quiet residential street where he was walking. Three men in the helicopter were also killed.

His sister, Lillian, said Otieno was nicknamed Simba by his grandmother, which means “fearlessness and bravery.”

Harper's top aide to quit

Brodie's exit fans rumours of cabinet shakeup

possible replacement

» Sources say Brodie will be replaced by Guy Giorno, a former chief of staff to ex-Ontario Tory premier Mike Harris.

The imminent departure of Stephen Harper's chief of staff could be just the first tremor in a pre-election shakeup of the prime minister's team.

Reports that Ian Brodie plans to leave Harper's office by the end of June fanned speculation yesterday that more changes — including a possible cabinet shuffle — may be in the works as the minority Conservative government girds for an election as early as the fall.

"We are now at most 16 months away from an election," said former Harper chief of staff Tom Flanagan.

"So I think any rational prime minister under the circumstances will be gearing up towards an election."

Canadian aid worker kidnapped in Haiti

Haitian and UN police were searching yesterday for a Canadian medical aid worker who was kidnapped in the hills above the Caribbean nation's capital.

Nadia Lefebvre was seized early Wednesday, said UN police spokesman Fred Blaise.

abductions

» Lefebvre's is the 20th confirmed kidnapping victim in Haiti this month. At least 139 people have been kidnapped countrywide in 2008.

The 32-year-old is on a short-term assignment in Haiti for the Paris-based medical organization Medecins du Monde, also known as Doctors of the World.

A spokeswoman for the group declined to comment.

Authorities have established contact with the kidnappers, Blaise told CTV in a telephone interview yesterday. As for Lefebvre, Blaise said: "We know that she's alive, she's safe."

He added that a ransom demand was being negotiated but did not disclose details.

The increase in kidnappings-for-ransom is likely linked to strengthening gang activity, Blaise said.

Food prices to stay high: UN

Soaring rice prices may begin to drop amid excellent production prospects this year, but overall food prices that have set off protests around the world are likely to remain high, a UN food agency said yesterday.

Global rice market conditions could ease as new crops are harvested around the world, said the Rome-based Food and Agriculture Organization. However, price pressure will remain high at least until October or November, when the bulk of this year's paddy crops reach the market.

Escalating food prices have triggered protests around the world in recent months. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

China says 'thank you'

Minister praises companies for earthquake aid

China's commerce minister took the unusual step of publicly thanking foreign companies for donating earthquake aid.

The minister, Chen Deming, issued his thank you on national television, dismissing accusations spread on Chinese websites that foreign companies have been doing too little.

Chen said China has seen what he called "the greatest amount of donations from the international community ever in history."

Chen said, as of yesterday, foreign companies had donated $245 million in cash and $29 million in supplies, including food, tents and bottled water.

Still, nationalistic Chinese accused foreign companies in Internet messages of failing to provide enough help and calling for boycotts of individual companies.

United Nations Secretary General Ban Ki-moon, second right, gets a tour of Shwedagon Pagoda yesterday in Yangon, Myanmar. Ban is on a tour to view conditions in cyclone damaged areas.

Ban visits Myanmar

UN boss 'upset' with conditions in region

UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon surveyed devastated sections of Myanmar's Irrawaddy delta yesterday and said he was very upset by the conditions of cyclone survivors.

Ban went on a four-hour helicopter trip that touched down at several makeshift settlements of refugees from the May 2-3 storm. He is one of a handful of foreigners allowed to see the zone firsthand.

"I praise the will, resilience and the courage of the people of Myanmar. I bring a message of hope for the people of Myanmar," he said, before embarking on the carefully orchestrated tour.

Ban and his entourage flew over kilometres of badly damaged rice fields, collapsed and flooded houses, downed trees and overturned boats, rivers swollen past their banks and people huddled on rooftops or in makeshift tent villages.

Ban was first taken to a village called Kyondah, where 500 people huddled in approximately 100 blue tents. The camp was set up on May 12 — 10 days after the storm hit. Ban, who spoke to some camp residents, said: "I'm very upset by what I've seen."

Foreign relief agencies say many parts of the delta — and even some areas close to Yangon, the country's biggest city — have not received sufficient relief supplies.

Your best friend can be cloned for $100,000

A northern California biotech company announced Wednesday it will clone dogs for the five highest bidders in a series of online auctions. Some ethicists condemned the offer, fearing it could lead to human clones.

Opening bids start at $100,000 for the service being offered by Mill Valley-based BioArts International. The cloning process is to be performed by a South Korean scientist who suffered international disgrace after being found to have faked research.

Some groups that monitor advances in genetic technology argue the company's project, called Best Friends Again, could serve as a gateway to more unsavory practices. The auctions are scheduled to begin June 18.

Ford cutting more jobs

Windsor laid-off workers taking up jobs at Oakville

long commute

» The mayor of Windsor has raised the idea of helping laid-off workers commute to Saskatchewan or Alberta to work and flying them home every two weeks so they can still be part of the Windsor community.

Ford says it will cut as many as 430 jobs at its Windsor engine plant as a consequence of lower production at assembly operations for the remainder of the year.

Ford is cutting output because demand is falling for gas guzzling pickup trucks and SUVs, which use the plant's V8 engines.

Ford announced earlier in the day it will reduce overall North American production by 15 per cent.

However, it expects to increase output of the strong selling Ford Focus compact, Edge and Lincoln MKX crossover models, Fusion car and Escape small sport ute.

Ford builds the Edge and Lincoln crossover models at its Oakville complex, that will also soon start building the Flex crossover model.

Some laid-off workers from Windsor are taking new jobs in Oakville to meet increasing demand. The Oakville operation is currently hiring 500 workers.

Housing sales cool off in T.O.

Consumer homebuying intentions in the Toronto area have dropped sharply this year, according to Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp.

About 6 per cent of households intend to buy a home this year, down from 9 per cent in 2007.

sales

» May half-month sales are down 15 per cent from a year ago, says the Toronto Real Estate Board.

» Inventory is up significantly, by 11 per cent, compared to a year ago.

Among potential first-time buyers, who have been a key driver in Toronto, buying intentions have also cooled — 40 per cent want to buy this year, compared to 47 per cent last year.

This year has seen four consecutive monthly decreases as the market cools.

Deals shaped Cup-bound Pens

Deadline trades were key to playoff run: GM

The Detroit Red Wings can be counted among the Stanley Cup contenders just about every year.

The Pittsburgh Penguins didn't become true Stanley Cup contenders until Feb. 26, just before 3 p.m. It was trade deadline day, when the Penguins acquired sniper Marian Hossa, along with forward Pascal Dupuis and defenceman Hal Gill.

It was a day for jittery general managers to wear their best poker faces and find out if they had the guts to make the bold move. Penguins GM Ray Shero had been feeling out Thrashers GM Don Waddell since the all-star game in Atlanta, but had given up hope of landing Hossa.

"That morning, at 10 o'clock, we didn't have anything going," said Shero. "By 3 p.m., when all the deals fell into place, it was satisfying and nerve-racking all at the same time.

"Looking back to Feb. 26, it's how our team came together. Those guys have really helped us. Looking back, it feels good."

DON WRIGHT/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Penguins forwards Jarkko Ruutu, from left, Maxime Talbot and Jordan Staal take part in practice yesterday in Pittsburgh. The Penguins face the Red Wings in Game 1 of the Stanley Cup final tomorrow in Detroit.

If trade deadline deals are judged by a team's success, then Shero may soon be hailed a genius if the Pens beat Detroit for the Stanley Cup, which begins tomorrow night in Motown.

The Red Wings made only one move that day, bringing in veteran defenceman Brad Stuart. GM Ken Holland was happy with a team that was dominating the league and would go on to finish first overall. The Wings were built on savvy drafting, patient development and the odd free agent acquisition.

The Penguins, by contrast, fast-forwarded themselves into contention when Shero made that bold move just minutes before the deadline. He surrendered Erik Christensen, Colby Armstrong, prospect Angelo Esposito and a first-round pick for Hossa and Dupuis. Shero had already acquired Gill from the Leafs for two draft picks.

Hossa, a sniper on Sidney Crosby's right wing, has dispelled the ghosts that haunted his past playoff appearances. Dupuis is a solid two-way player, Gill a stay-at-home blue-liner.

In acquiring the trio of veterans, the message sent to the dressing room was as important as the new players.

"That day we said, 'We could win this year. They're not waiting,'" defenceman Ryan Whitney recalled. "People talked about our team as a team that could win it in two or three years, and all of a sudden, we get Hossa and Hal Gill and Dupuis, and you say, 'All right, we're going for it this year. The time is now.'"

Ski jumpers claim discrimination

Lawsuit targets VANOC due to federal funding

By KRISTEN THOMPSON
Metro Vancouver

Four female ski jumpers said yesterday they had no choice but to take the Vancouver Organizing Committee to court to get their sport, for which men can compete, into the 2010 Games.

The suit's claimants, nine women from seven countries, including Canada's Marie-Pierre Morin, said excluding them is tantamount to discrimination.

Lindsey Van, an American plaintiff, said the fight should have been over years ago.

"It's 2008," she said. "It's very frustrating."

Deedee Corradini, president of Women's Ski Jumping USA, said they've tried every other avenue to get the sport into the 2010 program.

"This is the time and place," she said. "This issue isn't going."

Ross Clark, with Davis LLP, the firm representing the claimants, said VANOC, not the IOC, is being sued because it receives government funding.

"Because it is carrying out government policy to put on and host a successful Games it is subject to the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, which prohibits discrimination based on gender."

VANOC CEO John Furlong said he's not in a position to comment on the case.

"It's entirely the IOC's jurisdiction to decide what's in the program," he said.

Yesterday the IOC said the decision was made two years ago to exclude women's jumping because of a lack of international appeal, major competitions and not enough competitive athletes.

jumping history

» In 1991, the IOC ruled that all new sports must include women. Women ski jumpers say their sport was "grandmothered."

» Ski jumping has been an Olympic sport since 1924, and women have been jumping since then.

RAFE ARNOTT/METRO VANCOUVER

Toronto FC hosting pair of friendlies

Toronto FC will host two international friendlies this summer at BMO Field, the club announced yesterday.

Pachuca of Mexico will visit on July 5 and Independiente of Argentina will meet TFC 10 days later on July 15.

Pachuca, in the Mexican Primera Division, is the oldest club in the country and has won five national championships and three CONCACAF Champions Cups. Independiente, which plays in the greater Buenos Aires area, has won 14 Argentine Championships.

The Toronto FC will also host this year's MLS All-Star game on July 24. The MLS All-Stars will take on West Ham United of the English Premiership.

Watch Danica make history

YORK REPORT
MARTY YORK
marty.york@metronews.ca

Auto racing does nothing for me — in fact, I think it's a stretch to even classify it as a sport — but I will check out the Indianapolis 500 this Sunday, and I urge you to do likewise.

We could see history. Several auto-racing experts suspect a female — 26-year-old Danica Patrick of Wisconsin — could emerge victorious. And, if she does, we're told the world will be changed.

"She will change it by becoming an agent of reform, by using her victory to convince men to start measuring a woman by her skill instead of her bra size," says Ian O'Connor of Fox Sports.

"It will be a hell of a story if Patrick pulls it off, and an inspiration to young female athletes who have little use for the word can't."

Patrick already has won a significant race this year — the Japan 300 — but her Indy opposition will be more formidable. And yet, oddsmakers favour only five drivers ahead of her.

"Clearly," U.S. motorsports guru Bill Center says, "Patrick is fast enough. She has the equipment. This is her kind of track. She is a smooth driver. She has the ability to bleed every lap possible out of a tank of ethanol. She regularly outdistances rivals on a full tank, partly because, at 100 pounds, she's the lightest driver in the field."

Patrick has her critics, who say she's abrasive and a tireless self-promoter.

But on those smelly race tracks, where rancid fumes can cause irreparable damage to respiratory systems, Danica Patrick is a welcome breath of fresh air.

Here's hoping she records history Sunday.

» The Detroit Red Wings suspect too many of their seats will be empty for their home games in the Stanley Cup championship series, which begins tomorrow.

They site the economy, but they should also mention the Detroit Pistons, who'll be facing the Boston Celtics in the NBA's Eastern Conference final at precisely the same time as the Wings play their home games against the Pittsburgh Penguins.

Dumb.

» In the CFL, training camps open soon and, when they do, former Buffalo Bills bossman Marv Levy will serve as a guest coach for the Montreal Alouettes while ex-CFL superstar Allen Pitts will do the same for the B.C. Lions ... In the NBA, the New York Knicks need a point guard and sources tell me they've approached the Raptors with trade proposals which include T.J. Ford and Jose Calderon ... And please visit www.metronews.ca for my latest MLB Report, which contains juicy new information about Barry Bonds, and lots more.

Overbay shot helps Jays dodge sweep

Timely homer restores late lead

BLUE JAYS 4 ANGELS 3

Timely hits have been few and far between this season for the Blue Jays and home runs have been even rarer.

Lyle Overbay, the first baseman still seeking to regain the sweet stroke he had during a big 2006, delivered both with one swing last night, slamming a go-ahead solo shot in the sixth inning of a 4-3 win over the Los Angeles Angels.

Overbay's third homer of the season helped the Blue Jays avoid a three-game sweep at the hands of the AL West leaders before a crowd of 22,007 at Rogers Centre.

The Angels had just finished erasing a 3-0 deficit against A.J. Burnett in the top half of the inning when Overbay quickly restored the lead by crushing a 2-2 offering from Ervin Santana into the right-field seats.

It was just the 31st homer of the season for the Blue Jays, who started the day 12th of the 14th AL teams in both the longball and slugging percentage. They also opened play last in the majors with a .221 average with runners in scoring position, three figures that must change if they're to ease the load on their pitchers.

Short film about kindness wins

NFB ONLINE CONTEST A short film about a stranger who uses a pen to help a homeless blind man has won an online contest organized by the National Film Board of Canada at the Cannes Film Festival.

Historia de un Letrero (The Story of a Sign), a story produced in Mexico and the U.S. by Alonso Alvarez Barreda, won the contest in which online viewers could vote for their favourite film. Victor Gazon by Patrick Gaze was the sole Canadian film on the short list. The nine films were made available in English and French on YouTube and were viewed a total of 193,933 times in 10 days — twice as many as last year, said the NFB. This is the fourth edition of the contest, run by the NFB in collaboration with the Short Film Corner and YouTube.

Barreda's prize is a professional HD mini-digital video camera and a laptop computer with post-production software, courtesy of the NFB. His winning film can be seen until June 20 at www.nfb.ca/cannes or www.youtube.com/nfb. THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Strangers in the fright

First-time director finds horror genre

By ANN-MARIE COLACINO
Metro Toronto

FEATURE THE EVENTS that take place in the horror thriller The Strangers will have audiences fearful, but if you ask writer/director Bryan Bertino, it was the behind the scenes that most frightened him.

As a first-time director working with a star-studded cast including Liv Tyler and Scott Speedman, Bertino, 30, admits that during production he was often the most inexperienced person in the room.

> « When I sold the script, I never tried to attach myself as the director because I had no concept of Hollywood. »
> Bryan Bertino

"When I sold the script initially I never tried to attach myself as the director because I had no concept of Hollywood," he says, adding he was very grateful when Rogue Pictures eventually asked him to direct.

Set in a secluded vacation home, The Strangers tells the story of a couple whose getaway turns into a night of terror when three masked strangers attack.

Loosely inspired by Bertino's penchant for true crime novels like Helter Skelter, the movie largely emphasizes the eeriness of arbitrary violence.

"I have always been drawn to human sadness and fear — both those things cut people to the core ... and remind (them) of the things that matter," he says.

Using natural lighting and warm colours as well as not specifying the geographical location were employed to help place audience members inside the house, thus heightening the fear.

"I didn't want people to have a safety net," explains the Los Angeles-based Bertino.

"Emphasizing the randomness, emphasizing that it could happen to anybody is a really crucial thing."

Another important factor was adding drama and depth to the characters, he says.

"I wanted people to care about (James and Kristen) as if the strangers never came to the door."

When casting, the goal was to get actors fresh to the horror genre and what appealed to Bertino about both Tyler and Speedman was their experience yet lack of typecasting.

"I felt like it gave me the plus of being able to have some familiarity while at the same time not being so locked in that you were amazed that they were going in a different direction."

» The Strangers opens next Friday.

Postal

Stars Zack Ward, Dave Foley
Director Uwe Boll
18A

CHRIS ATCHISON
chris.atchison@metronews.ca

REVIEW JUST WHEN you thought you'd seen it all, Uwe Boll makes another movie and your faith in filmmaking plummets to new lows. The near-universally maligned German writer-director has once again looked to the gaming industry to produce yet another video game adaptation, this one based on the first-person shooter Postal. Boll fans — or those that simply love to hate his work — will recall some of his past video game adaptations such as BloodRayne, Alone In The Dark and House Of The Dead, films that have been deemed so bad by critics they're almost must-sees.

Well get your poison pens ready armchair movie connoisseurs, Boll has ventured into shock comedy territory. And when Uwe goes big, bad things tend to happen.

Take the fact that Postal opens to two Muslim suicide hijackers piloting an airliner, debating how many virgins they'll be rewarded in the afterlife.

When one informs the other that there simply aren't enough virgins to satisfy the 99 virgin quota they've been promised, they place a call to Osama Bin Laden, have the news confirmed and decide to fly to the Bahamas instead of crashing it. At that point the plane's passengers storm the cockpit and inadvertently redirect it into one of the World Trade Center towers.

Offended yet?

Let's hope not, because this is just the beginning of what Boll considers social satire. Along the way a baby stroller is hit by a van, Boll — who plays himself in the film as the owner of a Nazi-themed theme park called Little Germany — explains how his films are funded by Nazi gold (an past accusation by bloggers), a horde of monkeys sodomizes Vern "Mini-Me" Troyer to death and Bin Laden and George W. Bush walk arm-in-arm as a nuclear holocaust unfolds before them at the film's conclusion. Sorry to ruin the end for you, but you probably wouldn't have made it there anyway.

Oh, and there's also about a minute of full-frontal nudity involving Kids In The Hall alumnus Dave Foley.

Disturbed yet?

Boll's purpose is to shock and he does so with glee, sort of like a five-year-old who's just been taught the F-word and uses it with reckless abandon.

In more competent hands, this sort of humour can be effective, but no such luck here.

Worse still, Postal is just plain boring at times.

And in the one or two scenes that are somewhat funny, you'll actually hate yourself for laughing because the humour is so remarkably inappropriate.

Martin Scorsese, right, has exited the Bob Marley documentary in the works, citing scheduling conflicts. Jonathan Demme has taken over the project, set to be released in 2010. EW.COM

Coming back to The City

Cattrall needed out of New York for a while

By CHRIS ATCHISON
Metro Toronto

FEATURE THE STARS of Sex And The City can finally put four years of speculation behind them.

A big screen adaptation of their hit 1998-2004 television show is finally set to strut its way into theatres, returning Carrie, Samantha, Charlotte and Miranda to their legions of Manolo Blahnik-wearing, Cosmopolitan-drinking fans.

But that long march into the feature film limelight came with its fair share of trials and tribulations. Namely, tabloid speculation that Canadian star Kim Cattrall, who reprises her role as the seductive and sex-obsessed Samantha Jones in the film, was the cast hold-out delaying production on the film.

Accusations rang out that Cattrall was feuding with series star Sarah Jessica Parker and that she refused to do a film for less money than Parker.

Cattrall explains that when the series wrapped in 2004, she was in a difficult emotional situation and needed time away from the show and the city of New York to regroup and regain her footing.

"At the same time (the series was ending) I was going through a divorce," the Courtenay, B.C.-raised actress explains.

> « I had been through another divorce, but it had been private and this was incredibly public. I woke up one morning and it was all over the [New York] Post . » Kim Cattrall

"I had been through another divorce, but it had been private and this was incredibly public.

"I woke up one morning and it was all over the (New York) Post. It wasn't a column or a paragraph, it was all over the page, and speculating about my personal life. I've been very honest about many things, but I really didn't feel this was anybody's business. Then the show coming to an end and my dad was diagnosed with dementia shortly after that and that was the toughest thing of all ... I needed to take a timeout with my family.

"That's when I went back to Canada, started my own production company and decided I was going to spend less time in New York away from my family, I was going to spend more time in the vicinity of Canada.

"I was in Toronto for a time, then went to Vancouver, and then I went over to England and did a couple of plays where I have a lot of family, as well."

Cattrall says she was simply unable to build the emotional strength needed to convincingly resuscitate Samantha's sultry sensibilities.

By early 2007, however, the 51-year-old found herself in a better place — her father had stabilized, she began dating, and accepted a script from Sex And The City writer-executive producer Michael Patrick King, who would go on to direct the feature film.

The rest is history, but in hind sight, Cattrall admits she has no regrets about waiting to make the film. "We left at such a high place, if we had done the movie right after (the show stopped production), maybe it would have been too much.

"It's the anticipation, it's what you can't have that you really want."

» Sex And The City opens next Friday.

By STEVE GOW
for Metro Toronto

REVIEW WITH THIS Beautiful City, theatre and film director Ed Gass-Donnelly unveils disparities of class in a neighborhood where young, wealthy executives reside alongside baseheads, whores and the homeless.

Set in the microcosm that is Toronto's lower west end, City tells the tale of five residents whose lives are irrevocably intertwined after the wife of a successful architect seemingly leaps off a balcony in front of two drug addicts and a damaged cop.

A myopic drama with heavy undertones, it may not be surprising the film is loosely-based on a play: Although it has an intriguing set-up and lots of dramatic potential, it ends up a bit too staged.

Noam Jenkins stars in This Beautiful City, a story of intersecting lives in Toronto.

Sure, I believe condo-dwellers and hookers share the same sidewalks, but what urges Harry the architect (Noam Jenkins) to altruistically keep asking Pretty, the needle-abused prostitute (Kristin Booth) out for a friendly bite is never really explained or convincing.

Those types of holes aside, the performances here are what mostly keep City compelling enough, although it is also supported by some interesting visuals and a soundtrack featuring such Toronto acts as the Fembots and Sunparlour Players. The real question is, will anyone outside of Toronto care to notice?

A choked-up Madonna has premiered her documentary, I Am Because We Are, about orphans in Malawi, at the Cannes Film Festival. "This is a film I want the world to see," she said.

Indy avoided temple of doom at Cannes

INDIANA JONES received louder applause going in than he did coming out.

His latest adventure, Indiana Jones And The Kingdom of the Crystal Skull, earned a respectful — though far from glowing — reception Sunday at the Cannes Film Festival, the movie avoiding the sort of thrashing the event's harsh critics gave to The Da Vinci Code two years ago.

Yet Indy's fourth big-screen romp is not likely to go down as one of his most memorable. Some viewers at its first press screening loved it, some called it slick and enjoyable though formulaic, some said it was not worth the 19-year wait since Steven Spielberg, George Lucas and Harrison Ford made the last film.

"They should have left well enough alone," said Sperling Reich, who writes for FilmStew.com. "It really looked like they were going through the motions. It really looked like no one had their heart in it."

Alain Spira of French magazine Paris Match found Crystal Skull a perfectly acceptable Indiana Jones tale, a sentiment echoed by the solid applause the movie received as the final credits rolled.

"It's good. It's a product that is polished, industrial, we're not getting ripped off in terms of quality," Spira said. "You know what you're going to see, you see what you get, and when you leave you're happy."

The applause was louder at the outset, though. Fans at the afternoon showing, which preceded the film's glitzy formal premiere with cast and crew Sunday night, cheered wildly at an announcement the screening was about to start. Some even hummed the Indiana Jones fanfare as the lights went down. The applause at the end was more subdued. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Edge of disappointment

The Edge of Heaven

Stars Tuncel Kurtiz, Hanna Schygulla
Director Fatih Akin

14A

By ADAM NAYMAN
for Metro Toronto

The Edge Of Heaven features interlocking stories set on both sides of the Turkish-German border.

REVIEW TRY AS I MIGHT, I simply can't improve on a colleague's observation that Fatih Akin's The Edge Of Heaven received the wrong award at last year's Cannes Film Festival. More specifically, he wrote this coincidence-laden melodrama, which features interlocking stories set on both sides of the Turkish-German border, deserved the award for "most screenplay" as opposed to "best screenplay."

If that sounds like a glib dismissal of a film that's received mostly positive reviews in the year since its Cannes premiere, that's because it is. But then there's also something a bit glib about The Edge of Heaven, which shoehorns big emotions and an entire miniseries' worth of plot — we get violent radicalism, father-son strife and sexy young lesbian love along with the requisite tragic, plot-catalyzing deaths — into the network-narrative mode popularized by Crash and Babel.

The film's supporters would surely contend that the difference between Akin's film and those much-ballyhooed debacles is its vignettes focus on characters who never quite find each other, but this ignores the sheer contrivance underpinning these near-misses. It's easy to anticipate each neatly scripted twist well before it happens (the predictability is exacerbated by Akin's high-handed decision to announce the demise of two major characters with title cards).

That the film is handsomely produced and well-acted by its ensemble cast (top marks go to New German Cinema icon Hanna Schygulla as a staid sexagenarian revivified by a terrible personal loss) only places its failings in sharper relief.

That the talented Akin will be seen as having made a breakthrough by adopting a beyond-played-out structure — especially after his 2004 film Head-On framed similar cultural tensions along a straighter and more compelling trajectory — can only be considered a disappointment.

★★★★ (out of 5)

Robert Downey Jr. as Iron Man, a.k.a. arms dealer turned good guy Tony Stark, proves he's one of today's best character actors.

Jack (Ashton Kutcher) and Joy (Cameron Diaz) get hitched one boozy Vegas night. The morning-after annulment is cancelled when he hits a $3-million jackpot with her quarter. Now they're stuck with each other for the sake of the dough. A promising start can't save this ordinary, slightly offensive film.

Quote OF THE WEEK

"(Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull director Steven Spielberg and writer George Lucas) wanted the character to have a switchblade. The thing became like a third arm. The floors are now disgusting in my house because there's all these knife gouges in the floor from me throwing the knife. I was on the Transformers press tour while I was getting my knives ready. So I'd take this knife with me to Italy and to Germany, and I'm trying to stash this switchblade in different places in my luggage so I don't get in trouble."

Postal director is ready for critics

By CHRIS ATCHISON
Metro Toronto

FEATURE BEING REGARDED as the worst in any field can have its perks. Just ask the controversial, critically detested, German filmmaker Uwe Boll (BloodRayne, In The Name Of The King: A Dungeon Siege Tale).

Writer-producer-director Boll has been making video game adaptations for roughly five years now, a period in which he's come to be regarded in critical circles as one of — some would argue THE — worst filmmakers of all time.

But here's the upshot: the more they put him down, the less Boll cares. Instead of taking the criticism personally, as he once did, the new film Postal, based on the first-person shooter video game of the same name, is Boll's way of thumbing his nose at critics.

The social and political satire takes aim at everyone, as Boll explains in an interview with Metro, and is virtually guaranteed to leave audiences of all races, religions and nationalities offended.

"What they think about me they think about me," Boll says of his critics.

"I cannot really change it. If you read reviews of movies like House Of The Dead and In The Name Of The King, I have a feeling that people don't really look at movies anymore and they judge the movies like the worst of the worst, but if you go a little into detail and ask people was it really worse than Jumper or 10,000 BC or tons of other movies that come out each year? Normally the answer is no."

To say Postal pushes buttons, perhaps to the limits of poor taste and beyond, would be an understatement. The film satirizes the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, rips Muslim extremist groups, religious cults and religion in general, as well as poking fun at Nazism in Germany — and that's only in the first half.

Boll

Boll, who has literally fought his critics in boxing matches — he trained for the fights, they didn't — and pummeled a few of his harsher editorial adversaries, argues that there is a place for what he calls this type of 'absurd' comedy.

"I think movies like Life Of Brian would never get financed in the world today and I felt that, and I still feel that, Postal is one of the rare, ruthless, anarchistic comedies made. In that context it's good that a movie like Postal is made."

Others might disagree, but Boll, whose past use of German tax loopholes to finance his films, cementing his maverick status and allowing him to continue producing, really couldn't care less. Now that those tax laws have been tightened, placing limitations on write-offs for money-losing films, Boll has sought other means to make his movies such as cutting his budgets.

For the 42-year-old, that change in approach has signaled an opportunity to make more personal films, ones that may once again incur the wrath of critics. Not that he seems to mind.

"I'm planning to make a movie in the Sudan about the genocide ... diving into the Darfur and Sudan world without having a lot of American stars in the movie."

The world waits with bated breath.

Peasant rock's raucous sound

Welsh indie act Los Campesinos! crosses Atlantic

By BRIAN TOWIE
Metro Toronto

Profile LOS CAMPESINOS! kept their inebriated promises ... sort of.

Frame of reference time: The indie pop septet from Cardiff, Wales made a collective pie-in-the-sky vow in their early days that should they ever get big enough to play North America, they would all legally change their last names to Campesinos! (Spanish for peasants).

"We were all quite drunk at the time. It seemed like a good idea," notes drummer Ollie Campesinos! (All members of the band unofficially go by the last name in public.)

Well, success has arrived for the peasants and they've yet to make the official change: in mid-May, the group embarked on its first full-length tour on this side of the pond to promote Hold On Now, Youngster ... bringing cheery, unconventional and often raucous rhythms (accentuated by glockenspiels and violins) with a tongue-and-cheek youthful angst all over the continent.

Ollie says he's excited about the wealth of English-speaking venues.

"It's very exciting to go to these places, especially the ones we've never seen," he said. "You get a variation of audiences from place to place — They tend to be more standoffish in London than they are in New York. But the best is that we can actually speak the same language as the people in North America. We're often embarrassed about not being able to speak French or German when we play in those countries."

Los Campesinos! are touring North America in support of Hold On Now Youngster...

Stops north of the border include Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver, but Los Campesinos! has a couple of Canadian connections beyond the comparisons the band gets with Arcade Fire ("I suspect it's because we use violins a lot," said Ollie.).

The 2007 single We Throw Parties, You Throw Knives is a shoutout to their pals You Say Party! We Say Die! The Vancouver-based indie rockers supported Los Campesinos! for several European dates, and crashed out at vocalist Gareth Campesinos!' house.

The more significant connection is with Broken Social Scene. The band recorded Hold On Now, Youngster ... in Toronto with producer Dave Newfeld of BSS and is signed to the collective's Arts & Crafts label. No immediate plans to record with the notoriously collaborative group, however.

"Not unless they want to do Broken Social Scene Presents Los Campesinos!" Ollie laughs.

Busking pays off

Paddy Casey crosses Ireland to promote his music

By SANDY CAETANO
Metro Toronto

Profile WANTING TO MAKE something of himself, Dublin's Paddy Casey left home in his early teens and busked his away west across his homeland of Ireland.

The singer/songwriter says he felt at the time it was the only way for people to hear his music.

Along the way Casey crossed paths with musicians such as Shane MacGowan of The Pogues, Sinéad O'Connor, Damien Rice, Glen Hansard and an array of traditional Irish musicians as well.

"I don't think it was very hard at all, so it wasn't some big decision (to leave home), it was just more fun and easier that way," Casey tells Metro.

"At the time in Dublin, when I started busking, there were some really, really good people playing on the street," he continues. "It was like an all-star band ... because I just got to sit down and play with them, you know."

Casey perfected his craft the hard way, without the help of vocal coaches or guitar lessons. He taught himself how to play the guitar with Prince and The Smiths songbooks — something he's very proud of.

Years later — when Casey was in his 20s and home in Dublin — he was discovered by a major label scout who was so impressed with his talents he was signed almost immediately. Soon after that, he signed a management deal with Paul McGuinness and Principle Management New York and Dublin.

"It's been a long road coming, but it's worth the journey ... I suppose its been kind of wanting to affect people the way music has affected me," says Casey. "It's that wanting to give back ... it's hard to explain. I don't remember a reason why I started music, there's no particular reason why I do what I do."

Casey, who recently released his third studio album Addicted To Company, which debuted No. 3 on the Irish album chart behind 50 Cent and Kanye West, plays the Danforth Music Hall Saturday and Sunday.

Stone Temple Pilots are one of many rock acts that have reunited for the summer concert circuit.

Together again

YOUR FAVOURITE '90S band broke up? Fear not, they'll be back.

Seventies and '80s bands, too. And if not this year, maybe next.

This summer's concert calendar boasts tours by reunited rockers and relics — Stone Temple Pilots (split in 2003) and New Kids On The Block (split in 1994) — and recently re-energized bands such as the B-52s, the Black Crowes, Mötley Crüe and Yes. A round of reunion shows filled last summer's slate as well, with the Police, Genesis and Van Halen playing their time-tested hits for fans.

It seems that no matter how storied the split, almost every band is bound to get back together — and that could make the magic of an anticipated reunion a little less magical.

"If you can say it's a reunion of some sort, it does make it feel special and unique," said Michael Endelman, senior editor of Rolling Stone magazine. "But some you hear and it's exciting and some you hear and say, 'Didn't they just tour last summer?'"

The reunion-tour trend is inspired by money and the alluring power of nostalgia — for both fans and artists — so don't expect any slowdown, Endelman said.

"To go back on stage in front of an adoring crowd and relive some of these great moments and play all these old songs of theirs, psychologically it must be very seductive and very powerful for them," he said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Foxboro Hot Tubs

Album: Stop Drop And Roll!!!
Label: Jingle Town Records
Release Date: May 20

PSSSSST. FOXBORO HOT Tubs is actually Green Day with two more guys playing guitar and keyboards. Fortunately the side project additions really fill out the sound into an energetic '60s-style punk-adelic rock party. Oh sure, you can pick out the Kinks tunes here, Who riffs there and pinpoint a host of garage rock touchstones everywhere.

Genre purists will rightfully go elsewhere for their fix. The name of the game here is raunchy retro fun — and maybe trying to go-go dance and pogo dance at the same time.

Zaki Ibrahim

Album: Eclectica (Episodes In Purple)
Label: Sony BMG
Release Date: May 13

IBRAHIM'S LATEST OPUS is a display of the chanteuse singing over a wide range of sonic backdrops — ephemeral, boom-bap, and electronic. Zaki successfully marries her delicate songwriting and powerful vocals with beats tailor-made for her sensibilities. The user defines the machine, and not vice versa. The lynchpin of the piece is the sombre Francophone acoustic ballad Lost In You.

One can only hope that more artists would consistently release music that captivates as much as this.

Sam Roberts

Album: Love At The End Of The World
Label: Universal
Release Date: May 20

THE MONTREALER'S SHAGGY beard is gone; his band's psychedelic fuzz-rock jammin' phase is shelved. A return to Roberts' instant hooks of old for this third go-round, then? While Them Kids, Up Sister, the Brother Down sound-alike End Of A Empire and the damn fine piano boogie Detroit '67 might suggest so, more prominent are driving philosophical, soul-searching workhorses (Stripmall Religion, Lions Of The Kalahari, Sundance, The Pilgrim) on which Roberts will either captivate you with thoughtful lyrics or lose you with his band's semi-mesmerizing noodlings.

Actress Scarlett Johansson covers Tom Waits on her debut CD Anywhere I Lay My Head.

Atmosphere

Album: When Life Gives You Lemons, You Paint That Shit Gold
Label: Rhymesayers
Release Date: April 29

ATMOSPHERE HOLDS COURT with his tales of a generation down and out, and flexes lyrical muscle describing the emotions and psyches of people who had strayed from the righteous path one too many times. His superb rhyme patterns and seemingly endless content matter retain his rep as a rapper with depth. Sadly, a good chunk of his beat selections sound bland, making return listens less likely. A small divot in a potentially long career.

DUSTIN ESPANOL/FOR METRO TORONTO

Scarlett Johansson

Album: Anywhere I Lay My Head
Label: Rhino Records
Release Date: May 20

IF IMPECCABLE TASTE could alone carry albums, this would surely make any top ten list this year. But whatever brownie points Scarlett Johansson may have picked up for enlisting a bunch of Tom Waits numbers (plus one original) and a host of stellar musicians for her foray into popdom are buried by the resounding thud that is her voice. The starlet drains the songs of all drama and nuance, stumbling through the breathtaking pastoral backdrop so immaculately conceived by TV On The Radio's David Sitek, the album's chief collaborator. Even a minor talent could have turned this into gold.

Cook's win not an upset

Ex-bartender's vocals soared from the outset

David Cook's transformation from soul-patched slacker to American Idol is complete, and his overwhelming victory probably says as much about his soulful gaze and in-season makeover as it does about his chops as a rocker.

Or maybe it says even more about who's voting these days.

Other than his hair — both on his face and atop his head — not much about the 25-year-old from Blue Springs, Mo., changed since his performance of Bryan Adams' Everything I Do during the Hollywood round. Back then, he was a promising Idol hopeful, but he didn't have the instant juggernaut feel of 17-year-old crooner David Archuleta.

And yet when Cook was crowned Idol on Wednesday night, it was a landslide: Host Ryan Seacrest said he'd won by a margin of 12 million votes out of the record 97.5 million cast by viewers.

CHRIS PIZZELLO/AP

American Idol winner David Cook.

"I actually walked into this with no expectations, and I'm walking out of it with no expectations," Cook told reporters backstage after his win. "This show is a springboard, but it's still a crapshoot."

From the outset, the ex-bartender provided soaring vocals and just enough outside-the-box behaviour — see his rendition of Chris Cornell's version of Michael Jackson's Billie Jean — to keep viewers cooking up votes for Cook every week. Neither Cook nor Archuleta was ever a low vote-getter.

But it was Archuleta who always received the most praise — by both judges and loud fans — right up until Tuesday's final performance, in which judge Simon Cowell declared that Archuleta had scored a "knockout" over Cook, who sang Collective Soul's The World I Know, U2's I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For and Dream Big.

Or maybe being rebellious turned out to be worth the gamble for Cook; it's been suggested that a poor showing with the judges can drum up support from indignant or sympathetic voters.

Criticism may have made Cook's win sweeter for some, but don't call it an upset. Several online outfits predicted he would take home the top prize: A record contract and an SUV. DialIdol.com, which tracks busy signals on the separate phone lines dedicated to each contestant, correctly projected him the winner Wednesday morning.

Sex And The City, without the sex

HELL COMES TO YOUR HOUSE: The New Thirty is the title of a new sitcom being developed for Rosie O'Donnell and Fran Drescher, according to an AM New York story yesterday. No network was mentioned as the future home for the series, which will feature the two women as high school friends who reconnect with each other as tenants in a Manhattan apartment building.

"It's kind of Sex And The City but we ain't getting any," Drescher told In Touch Weekly. "It'll probably be more like The Odd Couple. I'll be Oscar and (Rosie will) be Felix."

Well, there's a show that will probably be made infinitely more bearable by closed captioning.

ALL GLORY IS FLEETING, UH, I GUESS: It seems I only heard about her last week, but already Tila Tequila has proclaimed fame wanting and expressed her desire to retire from the spotlight with the conclusion of this season of MTV's A Shot At Love With Tila Tequila.

JOE CORRIGAN/GETTY IMAGES

The New Thirty is the title of a new sitcom being developed for Rosie O'Donnell and Fran Drescher, above.

Famous mostly for wearing very little in magazines and being bisexual on cable television, Tequila told Entertainment Weekly that "this lifestyle is fun and I worked hard for it, but I think in the long run, it's a lot. I just wanna be in love for the rest of my life and move to an island and have kids.

"I wanna do meaningful stuff," the diminutive model said. "After a while you reach your goals and then what?"

Indeed. After achieving the lofty goal of lending the cover of Penthouse her youthful "credibility" for an issue and making hunky dudes cry like babies on TV with a show that's probably up there with The L Word among shows that men secretly TiVo and watch when their wives or girlfriends are in bed, just what else is there?

There are those of us, however, who hope to see Ms. Tequila do for string theory what she did for reality dating shows — after all, is there anything that can't be improved with cowboy hats and buckskin bikini tops?

Rick McGinnis writes about music, movies, books and television, but not opera.

Rehab Rock

On her latest album, Alanis Morissette reveals her grown-up take on love, loss and moving on.

By Karen Bliss
Contributing Writer

Alanis Morissette is all smiles as she sits for an interview in the depths of Toronto's Air Canada Centre, just 35 minutes before she opens for Matchbox Twenty. Other less confident musicians might refuse to do press before a concert; Morissette, however, doesn't appear stressed at all.

You don't have to be a celeb sleuth to figure out that her ex, Ryan Reynolds, is the likely muse for Torch, a song from her forthcoming album, Flavors of Entanglement. The pair announced their split last year, and Reynolds is now engaged to Scarlett Johansson.

"Torch is the I-miss-you song," says Morissette. "I don't ever talk about who it's about, but I think you can draw your own conclusions," she says, laughing.

With the exception of the Reynolds relationship, Morissette has only graced the media in a positive light. So, what exactly is a "rock-bottom moment" for this talented, wealthy and wise woman? "When there is no more sense of control. It's that proverbial, suicidal 'I don't want to do this anymore' moment."

As for finding new love, Morissette realizes that she isn't an easy catch. "I'm too exhausting to be loved," she says. "I'm still on a recovery journey."

OCEAN SPRAY Cool off this summer with deep-water facial mists.

Is your skin feeling hot and bothered? Pollution, sunshine, humidity — all of these can aggravate an otherwise-calm complexion. Facial mists based on sea-water minerals, essential oils and botanicals promise to take the sting out of summer skin. "They're very soothing," says Dr. Jensen Yeung, medical director of the dermatology program at Women's College Hospital in Toronto. One of the key benefits of facial mists, says Yeung, is "the prevention of water loss when they are applied immediately prior to using a moisturizer." In the summer, spraying your skin regularly can also lessen the redness that comes from sun exposure. TRISSE LOXLEY

Superhero rage powers up big, bold cuff trend

Transform yourself into a fantastical female with a bold cuff accessory. Above: Leather by Susie Love Jewelry $125, Made You Look, 1338 Queen St. W.

FROM THE STRONG-shouldered power women on spring runways to the blockbuster exhibition Superheroes: Fashion And Fantasy now on at the Costume Institute at the Metropolitan Museum in New York, the superhero has thundered into the fashion world with a Wham! Pow! Snap!

And it appears the rest of the world is also looking for larger-than-life, albeit, familiar heroes. Iron Man recently smashed the movie box office. Anticipation is high for the return of The Dark Knight and even the Incredible Hulk is getting another chance to wow us this summer.

"Over the past couple of years, fashion has seen the return of a more aggressive femininity, one that harks back to the overtly sexualized fashions of the 1980s," says Andrew Bolton, curator of the Met exhibition. "Then as now, the concept of the superhero is reflected in fashions that are both anti-nostalgic and unsentimental."

But what can real women — mere mortals — take from the wardrobe arsenal of the superheroine to transform herself into a fantastical female?

What about the seemingly simple cuff, like the bullet-deflecting kind Wonder Woman wore?

It's a universal equalizer — you can be any dress size or age and don a cuff.

The wide bracelet is a hot fashion item this season and they come in a dazzling array of materials including precious metals, resin, molten leather and gem encrusted. OK, so there aren't any made of "feminum" like Diana Prince's but they still pack a punch.

Slip on a wide cuff and it immediately gives heft to delicate wrists, signifying strength and power. The over-sized width, like a gauntlet, also gives the appearance of protection.

"The minute you put it on, it puts you in a different frame of mind. You feel like a super individual," says jewelry designer and retailer Basia Polowska.

Carole Tanenbaum, the renowned curator and connoisseur of vintage costume jewelry, also agrees that a cuff conveys super-strength. "It's very visual. It's one of the first things you notice because it's on your hands and the hands are the expression of the soul."

Today you can find a wide cuff from the cheap chic stores like H&M to seriously chic Tiffany's.

Chef Scott Saunderson in the dining room of Steak.

Profile THE STEAKHOUSE revival continues in the city with the conversion of yet another downtown space into an American-style beef showcase, this time in what was once a busy but unsung hotel eatery. Charles Shuchat was a partner in Bifteque, which occupied a vast space on the eastern end of the Sheraton Centre, but last year he bought out the lease and shuttered the room, renovating it into the dark, chocolatey, masculine space that screams steakhouse, and re-opened with Scott Saunderson, just returned from a stint in the U.K., in the kitchen.

"You couldn't sit down for a nice, quiet elegant dinner and just enjoy," Shuchat tells me, while his wife goes on another search of the cavernous kitchen to find Saunderson. The chef finally shows up, explaining the kitchen is four times bigger than anything he'd worked at before, which included Arlequin and Goldfish.

"My background is French cuisine," Saunderson tells me, "and in those kind of restaurants you aspire to get on the grill because that is where your principal items are coming from. When you're working the grill section, it's not like in a big restaurant where the grill guy is creating one specific thing for the plate, and the rest of it comes together. In a smaller restaurant, the grill guy controls the line and everybody around him — he's the last step in the creation of what you're doing. The first time I did that was when I was left to run a restaurant on my own before I left for England. The chef where I did my apprenticeship said, 'You know what you're doing,' and let me do that, and then you know what you're doing.

"Every different cut of meat has different textures to it that you're trying to figure out, especially with the gamier meats like bison or ox or caribou, they'll have different feelings to them, so that's the advanced level, is getting used to the different product levels. Most people don't understand the chemistry that goes into food, and there's a lot of chemistry. Most cooks don't understand that you have to let the meat rest five to eight minutes."

He agrees that steakhouses have come a long way from their nadir in the '80s, when they were perceived as old-school male bastions, and the last place you'd pay $10 for an iceberg lettuce salad with Catalina dressing. Steak, with its admirably straightforward name, features the classics, served in the customary manner — your meat on a plate, with sides ordered separately to share, which on the night I'm there featured garlic rapini that delivered redolently on the garlic.

Saunderson is serving the traditional cuts, as well as Wagyu, the American Kobe, a top-dollar benchmark on modern steakhouse menus these days. It's as good as you'd expect — nearly fork tender even at medium well, though Saunderson admits he thinks it's probably a food trend.

"I saw Kobe bacon the other day," he says, with a shake of his head and an incredulous look.

"I think the name is carrying a lot more weight than it should. If you ask somebody what a Wagyu is, they think it's the cut, but it's the cow ... A little knowledge can be a dangerous thing, but customers now are far more educated than they used to be. They know what they're buying."

El Mocambo

464 Spadina Ave.
416-777-1777
www.elmocambo.ca

Ambience: The El Mocambo and its iconic signage have stood near the corner of College and Spadina Streets since the 1940s when the bar was one of the top nightlife destinations in the city. Over the years, the El Mo has experienced a roller coaster ride of success and near destitution, peaking with its immense popularity between the 1970s and mid-1990s, down into bankruptcy, and with its current return to relevance, all the while playing host to a mix of stadium-filling and indie rock acts including the Rolling Stones. The venue seems to have found its footing once again after a successful renovation and has opened its arms to the best indie acts the city has to offer. Much like The Rivoli or The Horseshoe, the El Mocambo is a no-frills kind of venue where patrons are passionate about their music and could care less about intricate interior design or celebrity sightings. In this bar, relatively unknown musicians are the celebs.

Crowd: In-the-know students, hipsters and bohemian types who venture to the El Mo throughout the week for a fix of hard-edged rock, blues or jazz, depending on the night. Expect minimal attitude, except from those who take the stage (which is perfectly acceptable).

Dress code: Break out your vintage clothes and splash them with a healthy dose of irony. And if you're wearing jeans, make sure they're skin-tight to show off your vintage Chuck Taylors. Do you have Wayfarers? Wear those, too.

Will I get lucky?: You do stand a chance. This is a very welcoming crowd who warm to more than just the musicians playing on stage.

Should I dance on the bar?: Hell yeah!

Best reason to pay a visit: Because it's not often you have the chance to support local artists and one of the city's oldest clubs, just by stepping through the front door.

Cocktail du jour: Beer, shots of hard liquor and stiff mixed drinks are the preferred libations.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES | March 21-April 20
Somebody is concerned about legalities. Things perk up in the workplace. A family member covets a keepsake.

TAURUS | April 21-May 21
Anxiety puts you in a tense situation. A travelling healer goes home. A loss of respect won't be expected.

GEMINI | May 22-June 21
Somebody wants to talk about serious issues. A happy friend chatters incessantly. You will feel vulnerable this evening.

CANCER | June 22-July 22
A foolish hope goes up in flames. A woman will persevere when a proposal is made. A loser will change your world.

LEO | July 23-Aug. 23
You'll determine the wisest course of action. A love story becomes infuriating. You can't always respond with kindness.

VIRGO | Aug. 24-Sept. 22
A friend has news to share about a bad scene. Recklessness could lead to disillusionment. A significant fact has been overlooked.

LIBRA | Sep. 23-Oct. 23
Someone dear to you changes your mind. A nervous birdbrain loosens up a VIP. There's a chance to move up.

SCORPIO | Oct. 24- Nov. 22
Minimize an incident before a matter worsens. Independent action will provoke scrutiny. A man wrestles with angels.

SAGITTARIUS | Nov. 23- Dec. 21
You need a change of scenery. A companion is in love with the wrong person. Your judgment will be seen as correct.

CAPRICORN | Dec. 22-Jan. 20
Energy and effort pay off in a miraculous way. Someone needs room to grow. Make a clean sweep at work.

AQUARIUS | Jan. 21-Feb. 18
You'll realize that someone only has eyes for you. Dreams and wishes are fulfilled. Troubles have moved away from you.

PISCES | Feb. 19-Mar. 20
Fulfill your dreams by letting go of sorrow. You'll share news of a romantic plan. Avoid the usual pleas for commitment. AVATAR VENUS

The digits 1 through 9 will appear exactly once in each row, each column, and each zone. (A zone is an outlined 3x3 grid within the larger puzzle grid. There are nine of these zones in the puzzle.) Do not enter a digit into a box if it already appears elsewhere in the same 3x3 zone, or in the same row across the puzzle, or column down the puzzle.

Battle of the exes

Denise Richards is a big liar, claims actor Charlie Sheen's friends – one of whom says she "gets more than enough money from Charlie to never have to work, much less do a reality show that exploits the kids," PageSix.com reports.

Sheen and his friends are furious the actress has taped a reality show debuting this weekend on E! called It's Complicated, which also features the ex-spouses' two daughters, Sam and Lola.

In her bid to promote the show, Richards went on Today, The View and Larry King Live to explain she did it to make money to support her children.

But, "Denise gets $52,000 US a month tax-free in child support," a Sheen insider fumed. "Most people in America can figure out how to live on that, but Denise can't?"

In addition to the child support, Richards got $60,000 a month (also tax-free) for two years in alimony – adding up to $1.44 million. Richards also gets a chunk of Sheen's sitcom, Two And A Half Men, which "eventually will net her up to $25 million," the source said.

Earlier this week, Sheen released e-mails purportedly sent from Richards to his fiancée, Brooke Mueller, in which Richards states she wants another baby and had asked for a sample of his sperm. But Richards said on Today that those "made up" e-mails were not from her.

A rep for Richards didn't return calls.

A rep for Sheen released a statement saying, "The mere fact that she continues to publicly discuss and harass both Brooke and me three years after our separation, which for the record is longer than the actual length of the marriage, is beyond desperate and speaks volumes." Metro News Services

Steven in rehab: Report

So-called "Demon Of Screamin," Aerosmith lead singer Steven Tyler, has checked himself into a rehab facility, People.com reports TMZ.com as saying.

Tyler, 60, reportedly is seeking treatment for substance abuse at a California facility.

The musician's representative has told People he has no knowledge of the situation.

In September 2006, Tyler revealed that in 2003 he had been diagnosed with hepatitis C and had undergone 11 months of treatment.

After keeping quiet about the disease for so long, Tyler said at the time that he wanted to share his experience and knowledge with others.

Carmen's portable pole

Carmen Electra is releasing a portable stripper pole, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The actress is so into the exercise regime that she has designed a foldaway pole that can be set up anywhere.

"I am so excited to have a new pole coming out, a portable stripper pole," Electra said. "The great thing about my portable pole is you can put it in your own living room or you can do the workout in your bedroom. No one has to see you do it. It's up to you – you can perform for your husband or boyfriend, or do it more as a workout and focus on that."

Kristin opens up about drinking

She's known for sipping her share of Cosmos on Sex And The City, but in real life actress Kristin Davis steers clear of cocktails, usmagazine.com reports.

"I'm a recovering alcoholic," Davis, 43, says. "I've never hid it, but I've been sober the whole time I've been famous, so it wasn't like I had to go to rehab publicly."

She says, "It's caused a lot of confusion out in the world. I get sent many a Cosmo! I never drink them.

"I believe (alcoholism) is a disease. I don't think you can mess with it," Davis adds.

She says people used to say to her "'Couldn't you just have one glass of champagne?' And I would say, 'No,'" Davis recalls. "I'm doing well. I still have occasional bad days. Why risk it?"

Sienna, Rhys on the rocks?

Actors Sienna Miller and Rhys Ifans will soon end their relationship, femalefirst.co.uk reports friends as saying.

The couple are said to be at the lowest point of their relationship and Miller, 26, is said to be growing tired of 39-year-old Ifans, to whom she reportedly got engaged in March.

"It's awful but everyone who knows them can just see it coming a mile off," a friend of the couple told Grazia magazine. "Rhys seems madly in love with her still, but everyone is speculating Sienna has grown out of the relationship.

"It's almost painful to see them together because they've gone from being the perfect couple to him looking as if he's struggling to keep her attention. It's so sad."

The pair's troubles are said to stem from their hectic work schedules – Miller has been busy shooting The Edge Of Love with Keira Knightley and G.I. Joe with Channing Tatum, while Ifans has been busy working in the United Kingdom.

"Sienna promised to spend a week with Rhys," another friend told Closer magazine. "He arranged his filming schedule, but at the last minute she cancelled her trip, saying she had to work. Rhys hit the roof when he called her and found out she was partying in Los Angeles."

Ifans is also reportedly unhappy that Miller has been spending time with several actors, including Jared Leto and Sean Penn and her ex-boyfriend Matthew Rhys, who stars alongside her in The Edge Of Love.

Olsens deny coffee shop drama

Actresses Mary-Kate Olsen and Ashley Olsen have laughed off rumours a barista at their local coffee shop has been secretly trying to fatten up the stars – by substituting their usual skimmed milk with a full-fat version, imdb.com reports

A worker at the twins' local Starbucks outlet in New York has reportedly confessed to altering the sisters' morning drinks because he was concerned about their skinny frames.

According to OK! magazine, the girls regularly ordered fat-free beverages but, "the barista thought the Olsens were too thin, so whenever they ordered their usual drink, he would replace the skim milk with full-fat."

But a representative for the Olsens has blasted the claims, insisting the story is "ridiculous."

Penn admits dating Blake

Penn Badgley confirmed that he's dating his Gossip Girl co-star Blake Lively, the New York Daily News reports.

Now that their super-hyped TV show has wrapped for the season, Badgely finally opened up about his on-set romance with co-star Lively, 20.

Rumours of the two being more than just friends heated up after they were spotted smooching on a recent vacation to Mexico's Mayan Riviera.

"Obviously, there's chemistry there," Badgely, 21, told E!'s Daily 10. Despite that, he quickly added he was "not a fan" of on-set romances and thought they could "cause a lot of drama."

The actor also said shooting the show in New York City is different from Los Angeles, calling Gotham City a bit "tame" in comparison.

Love You co-stars step out

P.S. I Love You co-stars Gina Gershon and Jeffrey Dean Morgan are acting like more than just friends, PageSix.com reports.

The actress and the Weeds star were spotted recently at Libation in New York City, where they hung out upstairs together all night.

"They were quite cosy," said a witness. "They were sharing a burger and she was hand-feeding him Tater Tots."

The two left together and were overheard saying they were headed to another party.

Reps for Morgan and Gershon, who is currently starring in the revival Boeing-Boeing on Broadway, had no comment.

The report comes just a month after Morgan called off his two-month-long engagement to his Weeds co-star Mary-Louise Parker.
